Elderly woman's death follows Yale Avenue incident on June 27

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The relatives of two elderly women who were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from a hot-water heater June 27 said Friday they may sue over the fatal accident.

One of the women — Leona Scheve, 79, died Wednesday. The other woman, Martha Bosworth, 66, is still recovering, relatives said.

The women were found unconscious in adjoining duplexes in the 2800 block of Yale Drive on the afternoon of June 27. Assistant Fire Chief Bob Bell said the Fire Department responded by ventilating the duplex and shutting off the gas.

Both women had hot-water heaters installed recently — Bosworth in January and Scheve last September. According to Fire Department records, the hot-water heater in Scheve's apartment was the source of the fumes.

The vent pipe for the heater in Scheve's apartment was "dislodged" when Fire Department personnel arrived, Bell said. "Evidently, it was installed improperly," he added.

Charles Bosworth said Illinois Power Co. had been to his mother's apartment the day before the accident to inspect her heater, because she had been having trouble getting hot water.

The guardian of Mrs. Scheve's estate, Central Bank of Granite City, has retained attorney Maurice Dailey of Granite City. Mrs. Bosworth and her family have retained former assistant state's attorney Don Weber.

Both women spent several weeks in Belleville Memorial Hospital. Bosworth was released July 16, her son said. Scheve was released from the hospital 10 days before her death at The Colonades, a Granite City nursing home.

Duiley said it hasn't been decided yet whether anyone would be sued. "I know virtually nothing about it at this point," he said.

Both women were treated in hyperbaric oxygen chambers at Belleville Memorial to force oxygen into their blood, relatives said.

"It's a very serious thing," said Weber, Bosworth's attorney. "One woman has died, and my client has been seriously injured. We are currently compiling the facts to make sure that the party responsible should pay the damages."

It is not known whether city inspections were performed on either of the hot-water heaters.

A city worker said it is common practice not to inspect installations of replacement hot-water heaters, but it is required in new construction.

Public Works Director Brett Hanke could not be reached for comment.

The owner of the duplex is Tom Mielsky of Washington, Mo. He also could not be reached for comment.

Flood says others are 'mistaken'

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

EAST ST. LOUIS — Granite City real estate broker Gaye Flood gave her account Friday of the 1984 real estate transactions for which she is on trial in federal court.

It differed drastically from the previous testimony of the buyers and sellers.

Flood accused Jack Orwig, Pete Munoz, Gail Buenger, Richard McGinness and Edward McPike all witnesses for the prosecution, of remembering things that never happened. She said they hadn't told the truth, but they "could be mistaken, it was a long time ago."

But, she said, Paul Ray Bowler was lying. Flood was indicted by a federal grand jury on April 20, 1989, on one felony count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and six felony counts of making false statements on applications to obtain government-insured loans. An amended indictment, containing the same seven counts, was filed Aug. 25, 1989.

Flood was on the witness stand all day Friday, completing both direct examination and cross-examination.

Flood's role as the real estate agent in Bowler's 1984 purchase of apartment buildings at 3216, 3924, 4052 and 4060 Oakmont Drive in Pontoon Beach and a house at 2617 Pine St. in Granite City using loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration is the source of all but one of the counts against her. The other, a false-statement count, charges Flood induced Jack and Sharon Orwig of Granite City to overstate their assets on an application for a house at 22 Victoria Drive in Pontoon Beach.

In February 1989, Bowler pleaded guilty to a single felony count of making a false statement on a loan application.

Bowler, vice president of the Granite City school board and a former Granite City alderman, had SLATED TO BE DEMOLISHED: Neighbors in the 2100 block of Grand Avenue will have reason to rejoice starting Aug. 8, when these derelict houses and nine others are torn down. It will take about a week to raze the half block that borders the former location of the Novotny auto dealership on Madison Avenue. A QuikTrip store and a Jack in the Box restaurant will be built.

Invasion invades wallet as gas prices head skyward

By Sam Hananel
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Only hours after the dawn invasion Thursday of oil-rich Kuwait by Iraqi troops, the price of regular unleaded gasoline at the Clark service station at 20th Street and Madison Avenue jumped by nine cents a gallon, from 98.9 cents to $1.07 1/2.

The manager cited instructions from his supplier.

While Clark was one of the first Granite City stations to raise its prices, by Friday afternoon it appeared that most of the stations had followed suit. Acting due to uncertainty about the availability and cost of petroleum from the Middle East, most refineries serving local stations ordered price increases of up to 10 cents.

Here and throughout the country, managers quickly got the word from corporate headquarters that wholesale gasoline prices would rise.

"What is happening is mostly a result of psychological factors," said Walter Brown, spokesman for Amoco Oil's Midwest region in Oak Brook, Ill. "People are concerned about the situation."

He said Amoco raised its wholesale price for the Metro East region by four cents on Thursday.

Brown said that, although Iraq and Kuwait account for perhaps only one-tenth of U.S. motor fuel consumption, investors and oil companies are aware that conditions could change rapidly and the impact could worsen.

Don Turk, a spokesman for Mobil Oil in Dallas, said his company raised wholesale prices Thursday by 3 1/2 cents nationwide. He also attributed the rise to increasing instability in the Middle East.

Leonard Anderson, owner of the Mobil station at 23rd Street and Madison Avenue, said he received a call Friday morning about the wholesale increase but would wait until Saturday to change his prices.

'Fence me in'

Not everyone happy with city's yard rules

By Sam Hananel
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — All Sharon Thompson wanted to do was build a front-yard fence, much like her neighbors, to keep her grandkids from running in the street.

But the city's new fence ordinance got in the way.

Things are not likely to change anytime soon. Building Inspector John Jakich said no exceptions will be made to the city's fence ordinance, which was revised 10 months ago.

Although he has not attempted to have anyone fined so far, Jakich said several violation notices have been issued to residents not complying with the ordinance.

Thompson, who lives in the 2700 block of Dale Avenue, wanted to put up a four-foot-high chain link fence in her front yard. Thompson often babysits for her four grandchildren and wanted the fence to prevent the children from running into the street.

Thompson's alderman, Judy Whitaker, checked with Jakich and told Thompson that "I cannot have a fence around my yard." Thompson said. Thompson wanted an exception made in her case, but Jakich said there is "no room for relief the way it (the ordinance) is written up."

Other than Thompson, Whitaker said, no residents of her ward have inquired about the ordinance recently.

Several people, however, have called the Press-Record/Journal during the first several months of the ordinance to complain that it is unfair.

"A lot of people are not aware of this ordinance," Jakich said. "The first thing people say when caught violating it is that they are not aware of the law."

Jakich said he has asked several residents to modify fences to comply with the ordinance since it was enacted in its current form. Most violators are given 15 days to make fences conform to ordinance standards. "So far, we've had no big problems," he said.

According to Jakich, the majority of violations involve: failure to purchase a permit; failure to

Off-road vehicle fees to be refunded

SPRINGFIELD—Owners and dealers of all-terrain vehicles and off-road motorcycles who paid registration fees to the state will soon receive their refunds.

Gov. James Thompson recently signed legislation to repeal the law requiring the $45 registration fees. The funds generated from registration fees were originally intended to fund administrative costs, grants for riding areas and repairs for any environmental damage caused by the vehicles. But private landowners were exempted from the law, severely reducing registration dollars and leaving insufficient money to operate the program as originally intended.

Dunn said refunds and notices explaining the refunds will be sent out by the Department of Conservation in August. More information on the refunds may be obtained by calling the Illinois Department of Conservation, ATTY/OHM, Springfield, Ill. 62701-1787, (217) 782-2138.

Two charged with sex abuse, one sentenced

Two Granite City men were charged with aggravated criminal sexual abuse Wednesday in separate incidents.

Arthur Billick, 37, of the 2800 block of Pershing Blvd. was accused of fondling the genitals of a girl, 14, on July 7. Billick is being held in the Madison County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Larry Byrd, 26, of the 2400 block of Adams Street was charged with two counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse of two young girls.

Byrd pleaded guilty Friday in the courtroom of Madison County Circuit Judge Edward C. Ferguson.

Byrd was sentenced to four years probation, one year of it with intensive supervision. He was also sentenced to 10 weeks in the Madison County Jail, starting this weekend.

In addition, Byrd was ordered to pay for any counseling the girls might require and was ordered to seek psychological counseling specifically designed for sex offenders.

There were at least six instances of abuse of the girls, dating back to January of this year, said Assistant State's Attorney Kit Morrissey.

Violation of any of the terms of Byrd's probation could result in six months' imprisonment, Morrissey said.

U.S. Marshal Service museum is proposed for East St. Louis

By Tracy Corrington
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Three Illinois lawmakers hope to make East St. Louis the site of the first national U.S. Marshals' Service museum.

The museum would be filled with marshals' memorabilia — including a Jesse James pistol, Belle Starr's saddle, and other mementos from the Wild West. It would be a perfect accompaniment to the soon-to-be-built Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Park, the lawmakers say.

"(Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville) thinks the JNEM park is a perfect place to put the museum," said Costello aide Brian Lott.

The commission that is planning the park originally wanted a museum on the site, something in keeping with the westward expansion idea, and people associate the marshals with law and order in the frontier days."

Costello and Democratic Sens. Paul Simon and Alan Dixon have sent a letter to the U.S. Marshal Foundation in Sterling, Va., extolling the virtues of East St. Louis as a site for the museum.

The JNEM park, which last month received $12 million in federal funds for land acquisition, will cover 80 acres of riverfront property across from St. Louis' Gateway Arch grounds.

Simon also supports a $50 million museum of American ethnic culture to be built on the site, and approves of the marshals' museum as long as the two plans do not conflict, a Simon aide said.

The Marshals' Service, which is celebrating its 200th year of law enforcement, has no announced where it will build the museum, or when.

"Nothing is going to happen today or the next day or the day after," said Col. Herbert Bryant, president of the Marshals' Foundation. "We've also heard from experts in Wyoming and Tennessee, but there's no front runner at this time."

Bryant said the agency has not raised any funds for the museum, which will be paid for through private donations.

"We want to put the museum somewhere where it will portray the importance of the service in the early West and its expansion," Bryant said.

In honor of its 200th year, the agency has organized a traveling exhibit, which is currently being shown in the museum under the Arch. It will be there through the month of August, Bryant said.

Bryant said the St. Louis exhibit has received more visitors than any other stop on the tour.

In their letter, the lawmakers told Bryant that a museum in East St. Louis would have an assured visitors population; 1.5 million people a year visit the Gateway Arch.

They also wrote that the Metro Link light rail system, which will connect downtown St. Louis with East St. Louis, and the possibility of riverfront taxis across the Mississippi, would almost assure the success of the museum.

Panel OKs riverfront park funds for acquisition of 100-acre site

By Tracy Corrington
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Six year-old plans for an East St. Louis riverfront park were revitalized July 24 when a House panel pushed ahead $132 million to build the facility. It will mirror the Gateway Arch park in St. Louis.

The money will be used for land acquisition and site planning of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Park, Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, announced.

Costello requested the money, which will be used to buy 100 acres of vacant land across the Mississippi River from the Arch.

The funds were approved by the House Appropriations Subcommittee on the Interior, as part of the Interior appropriations bill.

"For the first time ever, Congress has given a financial commitment to the JNEM park extension for the East St. Louis riverfront," Costello said.

"This project has been one of my highest priorities. It is my hope that this funding will make the expansion a reality by the time we celebrate the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial park's 25th birthday this October."

The 100 acres are privately-owned and largely vacant, Brian Lott, a Costello aide, said. It includes the site of abandoned rail lines and storage facilities.

However, the Continental Co. operates a grain elevator on about five acres of the land where supporters hope to create the park, Lott said. Negotiations with the company are under way, he added.

The $132 million will be available as soon as the park is approved by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan, Costello said.

Lujan will not approve the park until all the land is purchased and an environmental impact study of the land is completed, Costello said.

"These funds will enable the needed land to be acquired, giving Sec. Lujan the opportunity to start planning as soon as he has approved the park," Costello said. "The key now is to present him with the final package of land that will make up the park."

The bill is not yet scheduled for debate before the full committee, but Lott said he expects it will be soon.

"We want to get this on the fast track," he said.

Bus to ball game slated

The Granite City Park District will sponsor its fourth 1990 trip to Busch Stadium in St. Louis on Thursday, Sept. 6, it was announced today.

The bus will leave the Wilson Park at 11 a.m. and the St. Louis baseball Cardinals will play the Montreal Expos at 12:35 p.m.

Tickets will go on sale for senior citizens at 8 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 9, at the Wilson Park office.

No person will be allowed to purchase more than two tickets. Proof of residence must be presented at the time of the sale.

Non-residents will be placed on a waiting list.

This will be the Park District's last baseball-game bus trip of the season.

Officials are encouraging all senior citizens to participate.

Workshop on piano literature

Space is still available in a one-week piano-literature workshop to be conducted by the celebrated concert pianist and retired music professor, Ruth Slenczynska of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

The workshop will be conducted this week, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, Aug. 6-10, in SIUE's Lovejoy Library auditorium.

It will focus on the works of Mozart, J.S. Bach, Beethoven, Schumann, Brahms and Chopin.

Slenczynska said she will be analyzing the works with what she calls a "12-characteristic series," based on the teaching methods of Sergei Rachmaninoff, with whom she studied early in her career.

For information about the cost of the workshop, which may be taken for credit or non-credit, persons may call the SIUE department of music at 692-3900.

The week-long workshop is part of the local university's Summer Arts '90 program.

$100 million for F-15 will boost area

By Tracy Corrington
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — McDonnell Douglas is almost assured of $100 million from Congress for its F-15 aircraft series, say officials close to defense spending plans.

Area legislators added that it is just the kind of boost the company needs to regroup after a corporate overhaul that ended with 4,700 employee layoffs in the St. Louis metro area.

"A commitment to $100 million translates into an excellent sign that the line will remain operational for the next few years. That's certainly welcome news to the 7,500 McDonnell Douglas employees who work on the line," said Rep. Jack Buchner, R-Kirkwood.

"It's also a common-sense compromise that recognizes the supremacy of the F-15 and its adaptability to whatever crisis may visit the free world."

Last week, the House Armed Services Committee followed a Senate lead and set aside $100 million for continued production and upgrades to McDonnell's F-15 series of aircraft.

The appropriation is part of the committee's proposed $283 billion defense budget which would take effect Oct. 1. The bill is not yet scheduled for a floor debate, but is expected to be approved.

"If the House committee set aside $100 million for McDonnell Douglas and the Senate did also, that funding is essentially secured," said a House Armed Services spokeswoman.

"It is not a contentious issue," she said.

The committee also authorized $1.47 billion to purchase an additional 36 F-15E Eagle planes. Last year, Congress also ordered 36 planes.

Filling those two orders will keep the F-15E Eagle production line open well into 1993, at which point the line is scheduled to be closed, said Robert O'Brien, spokesman for McDonnell Douglas in Washington.

"If it becomes law, the $100 million would enhance the capacity to develop and improve the F-15 line," O'Brien said.

"However, it will not save any jobs that are slated to be cut."

"Those cuts are firm and the employees have already been notified," O'Brien said.

Rep. William Clay, D-St. Louis, agreed that the funds will help, but only temporarily.

"The money will keep the line open while we try to make funds available for job retraining (for those who are being laid off)," Clay said.

Parent-leave bill will be resubmitted

By Tracy Corrington
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. William Clay, D-St. Louis, saw the parental-leave bill he has pushed for five years defeated again July 25.

The House failed to override a presidential veto of the Family Medical Leave Act.

Undaunted, Clay vowed the bill will return to the White House for a sixth try, during next year's legislative deliberations.

"This vote today caters to the selfish, narrow-minded interests of a few business concerns that don't want to help their employees," Clay said after the override attempt.

"We will bring (the bill) back to them as is, with no compromises. I won't play games like that."

The 232-195 vote fell 52 short of the two-thirds majority needed to override the president's veto and supporters lost five votes in the process.

The bill would have required employers with 50 workers or more to offer up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to those caring for newborn children or sick relatives.

The restriction on company size knocked 94 percent of the businesses in the St. Louis metropolitan area out of the bill's reach, congressional projections indicated.

In the St. Louis bi-state region, including Illinois, 53,638 of the 57,000 businesses have fewer than 50 employees.

The United States is the only industrialized country besides South Africa that does not have a family medical leave policy for its workers, supporters of the proposal said.

After the vote, Sens. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said they would reintroduce essentially the same bill in the Senate before the August recess.

"This is a fight to preserve our families," Clay said.

"And Congress has turned to labor standards to do that, because they have worked in the past."

Schools participate in academic contest

More than 50,000 students from across the United States, Canada and the Pacific Basin recently competed in the 14th Knowledge Master Open, a grueling academic contest. Using their knowledge of world history, chemistry, literature and 12 other subjects, school teams faced viad for scores based on speed and accuracy.

This is the eighth time that Coolidge Junior High School has entered the competition. Academic coach, Judy Hampton, described the event as "an activity the team enjoys and looks forward to each semester. This year, Grigsby entered the contest which added to the cross-town rivalry of the two schools.

There is now a traveling trophy, a state of the great Auk, an extinct bird, which is contest's mascot. Since one of our art teachers, Rich Ahlvers, made it for us, the students don't want the Auk to leave the building and will strive each year to keep him at Coolidge.

Results of the contest are tabulated into national, state and enrollment-size rankings by Academic Hallmarks, a Colorado publishing firm that hosts the event.

been indicted in December 1988 on four counts of making false statements on loan applications, but the other three counts were dropped in return for his guilty plea and his agreement to testify against Flood.

Bowler testified he met Flood after he attended a real estate seminar that explained how to make money by buying property with no money down and getting money back at the sales closing.

Bowler said he and an instructor from the seminar went to Flood's office at Re-Max of Granite City and she told him it was "done all the time" and agreed to help him. Flood testified Bowler and his "financial adviser" had come to her office and Bowler had said he wanted to start investing in real estate. But, she said, he said nothing about his "nothing down, money back" scheme.

"I was kind of excited, I thought I had a new, good customer," she said. "He asked about no money down once, but I told him he couldn't do it because he wasn't a veteran. That (VA-insured) was the only way I knew how to do it."

Bowler testified that from that time on Flood handled all the real estate transactions and everything he did, he did because she told him to do it.

Flood said she helped Bowler find property and made offers and sales contracts for them, but she never got involved in obtaining financing.

"He seemed to know a lot more about real estate investing than I did," she said.

Bowler admitted on loan applications he had lied about his place of employment, his assets and his liabilities, but said he had been instructed to do so by Flood.

Flood said she knew nothing about financing or what was required for loans. Bowler, Flood said, arranged for financing on his own and she never got involved in the process.

Bowler said Flood arranged for him to buy the Oakmont properties although she knew they were unemployed and had no money.

Bowler testified Flood told him he needed to get an employment verification signed, and he went to Flood's office and met Flood and McPike, a loan officer from Delmar Financial Co. in Clayton.

Bowler said he had gotten the form from them, taken it to his sister and had her sign it, and returned it to Flood's office.

Flood said she never knew Bowler needed a verification of employment and never knew he didn't have a job.

Bowler testified Flood told him he needed to have $73,000 in his bank account for the downpayment. Flood said he got $50,000 from a friend and $23,000 from Flood and deposited it in the American Heritage Bank next to Flood's office.

Two days later, Bowler said, Flood told him it had been verified and to withdraw it, so he did and returned the money to the friend and to Flood.

McPike testified Bowler told him he didn't have the money for the downpayment, but he used the loan application in Flood's office, but said he would before the closing.

McPike said he got a call from someone telling him the money was in the bank, so he hand-carried a verification, deposit form to the bank and got it signed.

Flood said she would have had no idea when the verification was going to be made and did not know how to calculate a downpayment. Flood said she had loaned Bowler $23,000, but said he told her it was for his trucking company.

"Mr. Bowler asked to borrow $20,000 to $25,000 for a couple of days," Flood said. "As I understood it the company had a standing contract with Granite City Steel and he needed it for something to do with the trucking business."

For the actual sales closing at Madison County Title Co. in Edwardsville, Bowler said he obtained, at Flood's direction, a signature on a cashier's check for $36,500.38 for one of the downpayments.

For the other downpayment, Bowler said Flood gave him a cashier's check for $33,533.82, but he didn't know whose money it was.

Flood testified that, on the day of the closing, Bowler had showed up at her office in Granite City several hours late. She said he had cashed a check and one personal check.

Since Madison County Title had a policy to accept only cashier's checks, Flood said she and Bowler stopped at Colonial Bank on the way to the closing. Using the Re-Max escrow account, Flood said, she cashed a cashier's check for Bowler.

Flood said she believed Bowler had the money. "He had a check, it was made out to me, made out to Madison County Title. I figured he could write another one to the escrow account later."

Buenger and McGinness, the Oakmont sellers, testified they went to Flood's office after the closing and signed over their "proceed checks" from closing to Flood. Flood, they said, then gave them checks based on the selling price on a Re-Max closing statement, which was lower than the selling price for which Bowler had gotten his loans.

Those closing statements showed the standard 6 percent commission on the sales.

Flood said she remembered signing the checks for Buenger and McGinness, but did not meet them or know any of the arrangements of the closing. Flood said the Re-Max secretary brought the checks to her desk and she just signed them.

Since she was agent for the buyer, Flood said, she wasn't involved in the transaction beyond getting an agreed-upon offer. The actual workings of the sale, she said, was the job of the listing agent — in this case George Crews of Granite City. Flood said she didn't question why the sellers were being paid by Re-Max rather than the title company.

Flood testified she had been angry with Crews because he had agreed to a reduced commission on the Oakmont property without consulting her. She testified she only made $5,000 commission on the transaction. Bowler said that after the closing Flood sent a check to his bank to cover his signature-loan cashier's check and gave him two other checks as proceeds from the closing.

Flood said the Re-Max secretary who kept the escrow account had approached her after the closing and said there was "a whole lot of money" left over in the escrow account from the Oakmont properties.

Flood said they had checked the records and decided that, since loans were made to Bowler, it was his money.

Flood said rather than have Bowler write a check for the cashier's check she bought for closing, that amount was just left in the account.

"At Bowler's request, she said, another check (for approximately the same amount as the signature loan) was sent directly to his bank."

Finally, she said, one check was made out to Bowler for the money still left over and another for the security deposits on the apartments.

Flood testified she didn't even know Bowler had gotten money back at the sales closing of the Pine Street property.

Bowler and Munoz, the Pine Street seller, both testified Munoz had signed over his proceed check from the closing to Bowler and Bowler had then written Munoz a check for the amount Munoz expected as a result of the sale.

Both testified the exchange took place in Flood's car outside the Madison County Title office after she brought the check out of the office.

Flood testified she knew Bowler was writing a check when she got to the car, but didn't know what it was for or what it was worth.

Bowler testified he pocketed $10,000 in the transaction because Flood had drawn up one sales contract for $50,000 for Munoz and one sales contract for $60,000 for Bowler's loan.

Flood testified she had no idea where the contract for $60,000 came from and only learned about it as a result of the later federal investigation.

Orwig testified that Flood had had him write a false explanation of where he got downpayment money for his VA-insured loan. He said she had suggested he borrow the money from Heitman Steel, his employer, but told him later he couldn't show it had been borrowed.

Flood said she had suggested Orwig approach Heitman for money for moving expenses, since he had just moved to Granite City. Flood said she had asked the company to buy the equity in his house in Ohio.

"I never told him to borrow it," Flood said. "I told him he couldn't borrow it."

Flood said she had never seen Orwig's handwritten statement, but he testified she helped him prepare in her office, until the investigation.

Under cross-examination, Flood testified that although she was the broker of record at the Re-Max office and she signed all the checks, the secretary actually kept the escrow account and made out the checks.

haven't heard a comment from anyone," he said. "We've sold as much gas today as we did yesterday."

Even Huck's Convenience Store at Madison and Niedringhaus avenues couldn't escape the price increase. "My supervisor told me to raise the prices just a few minutes ago," said Huck's manager Diana Cachera on Friday afternoon.

install the fence with the finished side out; failure to remove an old fence, resulting in a double fence on the same lot; installing a fence in the front yard; or placing improper fence setbacks on corner lots.

The Fence Compliance Law went into effect on Sept. 25, 1989, to address numerous residents' complaints that the old ordinance was outdated. Among other prohibitions, it limited fence height to 4 1/2 feet, since changed to 6 1/2 feet.

"We used to have all kinds of arguments because the old fence ordinance we had was almost unenforceable. It wasn't written for today's needs," Jackie said.

Despite the inability to make exceptions to the ordinance, Jackie said, it does not need to be amended further because it is serving its purpose well.

Calling the shots

Parker's officiating excellence lands him in prep Hall of Fame

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

Keith Parker didn't start officiating for the money. And he certainly never envisioned making such a long career out of it.

But Parker and the striped shirt became a perfect match. After blowing a whistle on courts for the past 40 years, the 67-year-old Parker finds himself in some rather nice company.

On July 6, Parker was one of 14 people inducted into the National High School Sports Hall of Fame in ceremonies at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Minneapolis. Parker, a teacher and coach in the Granite City school district from 1955 until his retirement in 1985, was inducted along with Olympic decathlete Rester Johnson, Los Angeles Laker legend Jerry West and Cheryl Miller, perhaps the most famous high school and college women's basketball player ever.

There are now 118 in the Hall of Fame, including Bill Bradley, Jesse Owens, Oscar Robertson, Red Grange, Johnny Bench, Arnold Palmer, John Havlicek, Merlin Olsen, Pat Summerall, Len Dawson, Paul Hornung, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Bart Starr and Don Sutton.

Parker, understandably, is honored to be in such company.

"It was just a fantastic weekend," he said. "It was quite an honor to be up there with some great athletes, coaches, officials and administrators. It was an affair to be remembered."

Parker also a member of the Granite City Sports Hall of Fame and the Greater St. Louis Athletic Association Hall of Fame, was nominated for the national honor three years ago by the Southwestern Illinois Officials Association. After several preliminary stages, he was elected by a national committee of 12 and informed in March. "I was quite surprised to get the call," Parker said. "But it was a big weekend in Minneapolis. Our ceremonies were held at the same time the Olympic Festival was being held there. There were about 1500 people at the banquet." Parker is a native of Gillespie, Ill., and went to the University of Missouri after high school graduation in 1940. He played football for two years under Tiger coach Don Faurot and also ran track. His highlight there was a three-interception game against Nebraska as the Tigers won the Big Six Conference and went to the Sugar Bowl.

He went into officer's training for the Marines and ended up at Purdue in 1943, where the Boilermakers won the national championship with a 9-0 record. Parker had touchdown runs of 29 and 59 yards in a big game against Ohio State. After serving in World War II, Parker returned to Missouri and got his degree in physical education and recreation in 1946.

He was drafted by the Baltimore Colts, one of the new teams in the new All-American Football Conference, but lasted only half a season before a bad knee forced him to give up playing. He and his high school sweetheart, Clara, had been married in 1944 and he began his educational career at Roxana High School in 1948.

He got into officiating while at Bushnell (Ill.) in 1950. Parker had one stopover in Maplewood, Mo., before landing in Granite City in 1955.

"Officiating was just something I wanted to try," Parker said. "It's certainly not anything you do for the money, although back then I could use a little extra money. I just got hooked on it. I never thought I would do it as long as I have."

He worked the Illinois state tournament in 1966, 1968 and 1969, and in 1968 he also worked the Missouri state tournament.

"I don't think anyone else has done that," Parker said. "I worked the Missouri tournament on Monday and Wednesday, then the Illinois tournament on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday. I needed some rest after that week."

Parker also began officiating football in 1958, so he will be beginning his 33rd season on the gridiron this fall.

"Officiating was just something I wanted to try. I never thought I would do it as long as I have. I really enjoy the high school games. I like working with high school kids. That's what the games are there for."

—Keith Parker

"I prefer doing basketball," Parker said. "The football rules are difficult, but basketball is more of a challenge. There are lots of ways to interpret."

So interpret he did. Parker began putting on officiating clinics in 1954, and in 1954 he ran a clinic at Springfield Lanphier High School to unify officiating between northern and southern Illinois.

"The officials in the south were considered much 'tighter' and players could get away with more up north," Parker said. "I was asked to try to get both ends of the state consistent and I was happy to do it."

The funniest incident Parker remembers is the night in Eureka, Mo., when someone slid a possum out onto the court. He also once gave Riverview coach Joe Hall five fumbles in one game.

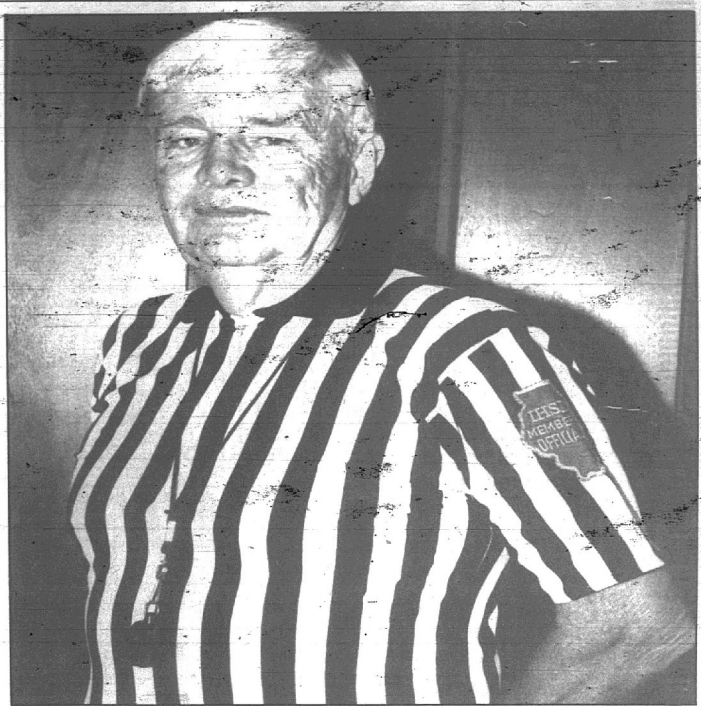

"You shouldn't go out of your way to give technicals," he said. "But if you do it when you have to, the coach will respect you and he'll hire you again. And after I gave Hall those five technicals, everybody wanted to hire me for their games against him."

Parker has been an official basketball rules interpreter for the IHSA for 25 years. But he's not satisfied just to interpret. He and long-time partner Eck Osiek of St. Charles, Mo., stay active. Osiek, 72, began officiating in 1940 and the two have been partners since 1953.

"Ed is probably even more energetic than I am," said Parker. "And he doesn't have to do it. He's been a sporting goods salesman for a long time and has really made a nice living from it. It's nice to work with somebody who knows you always know where the other guy is. One can drive to the games if the other one isn't feeling well and things like that."

Parker was at Cooke Junior High School for most of his teaching career. Clara Parker worked at Central Bank before retiring in 1986. They have three children (Jim Parker, Pat Hewlett and Jane Franko) and five grandchildren (Jim and Lisa Parker, Ann and Mark Hewlett, and Jonathan Franko).

"It was tough not being able to see the kids

1990 inductees form distinguished group

It was yet another distinguished class of inductees into the National High School Sports Hall of Fame.

Fourteen others were inducted along with Granite City's Keith Parker in ceremonies in Minneapolis on July 6. Among the most accomplished:

Cheryl Miller, besides Parker was Bill Blackburn of Oklahoma, who worked more than 3,500 basketball and football games, including Big Eight football. The highlight was the 1978 Cotton Bowl between Notre Dame and Texas, when Joe Montana and the Fighting Irish wrapped up the national championship.

Rater Johnson of California was a four-sport star at Kingsburg High School before taking a silver medal in the decathlon at the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia. Johnson then took gold in the 1960 decathlon run at Haskell Institute in Lawrence, Kan., in 1957 (4:22.8). He also won the 10,000 meters in the 1964 Olympics in Los Angeles. He won the Sullivan Award in 1960 as the outstanding amateur athlete, was athlete of the year in Sports Illustrated and sportsman of the year in Sport magazine.

Cheryl Miller scored 3,446 points and pulled down 1,620 rebounds in four years at Riverside (Calif.) Poly High School. Her teams went 132-4, including 84 wins in a row, and won four state titles. Miller scored 105 points in one game. Her college teams at USC won two national titles and she was a four-time college All-American and three-time national player of the year. She was also the leading scorer for the U.S. women's team which won the gold medal in the 1984 Olympics. Miller is now an assistant women's coach at USC and a television commentator.

Billy Mills set the national high school record for the mile run at Haskell Institute in Lawrence, Kan., in 1957 (4:22.8). He also won the 10,000 meters in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. Mills was appointed assistant commissioner of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Indian Affairs in 1970, and he has served on the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. His life was the focus of a 1984 movie, Running Brave, starring Robby Benson.

Walter "Buck" Van Huse coached high school basketball for 37 years in Tennessee, with a record of 1,021-313. He won 30 or more games 13 times and 20 or more 32 times. He took his teams to the state tournament 14 times, with his 1960 Hampton team winning the state title. He was the subject of two books. His 1,021 victories left him five short of the national record held by Leslie Gaudet of Louisiana (1937-70), and Van Huse planned to get the record this year at Kingsport High School. Tragically, Van Huse, 71, died five days prior to the Hall of Fame ceremonies.

grow up as much as I wanted to," Parker said of his busy schedule all those years. "It takes a special kind of life to do that."

"But there was no doubt I wanted to keep officiating after I retired. And as long as my legs go, I'm going. And so far they feel fine. If I feel I'm not being fair to the coaches and the players, I'll be the first to know."

"You don't do it for the money (he started out at $2 per game and now gets as much as $50 per game). You have to enjoy it, and I hope we can find more young kids who want to get into officiating."

Parker jogs and walks to stay in shape, and he looks trim and ready for another season. He's on a football crew with Bill Schmitt, Babe Champion, Bob Holshauer and Paul Mushill.

"I'm able to do more football since I retired," he said. "We can do the 4-00 (sophomore and freshman) games more often now. I still do maybe 15 college (basketball) games a year, but I really enjoy the high school games. I like working with high school kids. That's what the games are there for."

Scoreboard before losing to Read's Metro in the first game of the championship round. Jacobsmeyer's came back in the second game to beat Read's Metro 3-1 for the tournament victory.
